Autumn / Winter 2026

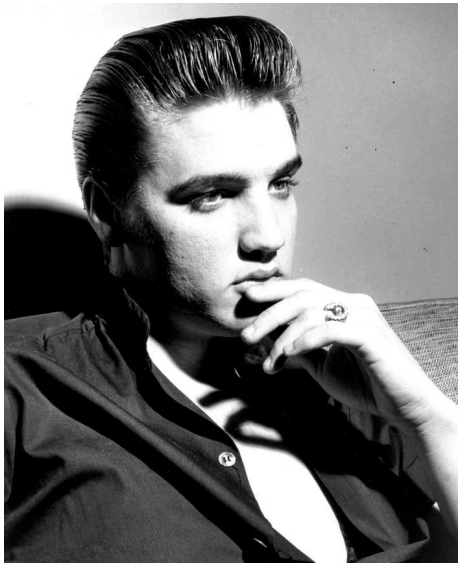

Good Morning,

It is what it is….or is it?

A couple of years ago at our Strictly Elvis Festival I met a charming young mum who had a 'It is what it is' tattoo on her arm and taking the risk that she might tell me to mind my own business I asked her what it meant - or perhaps more succinctly, what it meant to her. She told me that she had it done in memory of her own mum who had used the phrase a lot – always accepting the things that she couldn't personally change and just getting on with life as she knew it.

I've thought about it lots of times since – this acceptance of what we understand the norm to be and I suppose I admire her mother for instilling acceptance into her daughter's thinking – I wish I could be the same. Unfortunately, (for me) I can't. I question everything and strive to be better in what we do and I get frustrated if we can't be. I get really wound up by advertising – both general and in the Elvis world – by organisations claiming things that they clearly are not, or offering things that are not as they seem, or worse, by copying the wording we use and claiming it as their own. As if! I'm sure many of you will have been 'caught out' by this and one person recently asked me "why didn't you warn us" without first working out that for all kind of legal reasons I just couldn't.

All I can say without being sued is to be careful. Look at the product (be it an item or a service) and how professional the people are who are offering it – how much genuine experience do they have, how much research goes into everything they do, are they selling up to the standard of quality you would wish for, or down to a price for what they can get away with, what do their reviews say about them and then study their advertising – how truthful are the words (and especially pictures!) or is this AI starting to dictate what we see? What we don't want are any members of our Elvis Family being misled or disappointed by something that isn't what you hoped it to be.

The Colonel knew a carnival trick or two (the dancing chickens being just one) but he didn't have to use any trickery when he took over the management of Elvis. With 'Mister Presley' he, and all the fans, got exactly 'what it says on the tin' – hard working, good looking and the greatest entertainer the World has ever seen. Nobody could argue with that….it is what it is!

Cheers for now

Elvis - Young Dreams by Liz Irvine

Hi my name is Liz Irvine (nee Monaghan) I was fortunate enough to have been on the Fan Club trip to see Elvis in 1977. I was only 16 years old and what an experience I had thanks to David and his team! I recently caught up with him at The Elvis Touch birthday bash and took the opportunity to thank him for all the wonderful memories, if it hadn't been for him and his fantastic team, I would never have been able to see Elvis live on stage.

After speaking to David and Carol, they asked if I could write a piece about my experience for the newsletter, so here goes.

For as long as I can remember, I have loved Elvis. So, in 1976 when reading my latest copy of Elvis Monthly, I saw the advert for the fan club trip the following June ('77). I was so excited and determined to go. I filled in the form and sent off my deposit but when I told my family what I was planning to do, my parents and eldest brother hit the roof. After the dust settled a little, my mum agreed that it was an amazing opportunity but due to my age (and being the youngest in the family) she suggested I wait another year or two. However, I knew in my heart if I didn't go then, I never would (oh how true was that?). My dad wasn't happy either but said "if we deny her, she'll just be all the more determined to go", I think he never expected me to actually save enough money and hoped that through time the notion would fade (little did they know the pull of Elvis).

I had just left school and started working as a seamstress at a local factory. I took every opportunity to work overtime (almost every evening and weekend). With every pay packet I would check off another milestone on my savings journey and envisage the miles across the Atlantic.

When it came time to pay the trip in full, I had saved enough but still had a couple of hurdles to pass. Unbeknownst to me, David had contacted my dad for written permission to allow me to go, my brother was pleading with him not to allow it but my dad said as I had worked so hard, he couldn't refuse and David had helped put his mind at ease, reassuring him that the team would look after me and that they were a reputable organisation. The final barrier was that I needed to pay via cheque and didn't have a chequing account, so few people did have at the time, I turned to my boss who was happy to write me a cheque as he knew how hard I had worked to raise the money on my own and how much it meant to me.

So in June 1977, a wee 16-year-old girl from a small village in Ayrshire, Scotland went on the trip of a lifetime. From the moment I got off the bus at Victoria Coach Station in London, I spotted other girls with the red and white baggage tags and I was immediately with friends. When we reached Gatwick airport, I was introduced to a girl called Marlise who the team had paired me with for the trip as a solo traveller. I was well taken care of by everyone. The whole trip was amazing, David and the team had everything planned to a T. I had the time of my life and Elvis was amazing. The most memorable concert for me was in Cincinnati where we were sat so close (Floor 1, Row F, Seat 8 to be precise) tickets we could never have secured without the amazing hard work of the Elvis Travel Service team.

In the end, my family needn't have worried as I was now part of The Elvis family.

Thanks a million David,

TCB Liz.

PS – this trip was so amazing that I also went the following year for the first anniversary.

C C Rider

By Carol Wade

Late last year, I began researching the Elvis movie Stay Away, Joe, as many of the film's location scenes were set to feature in this year's Spring Break to Arizona. The filming of the movie proved to be a fascinating chapter in Elvis' life, for several reasons. Not only was much of the film shot on location amid the spectacular landscapes of Sedona and Cottonwood, but it was also a time of great anticipation, with Elvis preparing to become a father. Meanwhile, behind the scenes, Colonel Parker was also deeply involved in negotiations for what would eventually become the legendary '68 Comeback Special.

Perhaps most striking, though, is just how much Elvis seemed to enjoy himself throughout the production. He clearly appreciated the warm welcome he received from local residents and was surrounded by family and close friends during the shoot. Away from the cameras, he also found plenty of time to indulge in two of his favourite pastimes: horse riding and motorcycling.

It was this motorcycle connection that led me to the fascinating story of the Triumph Bonnevilles.

Let's go back to the beginning, Elvis' association with Triumph motorcycles started in 1965 while he was taking a break from filming and spending time with his close-knit circle of friends, the "Memphis Mafia," at his Bel Air home.

When his friend Jerry Schilling purchased a new Triumph T120 Bonneville, Elvis took the bike for a ride around the neighbourhood and was immediately impressed. Returning home, he instructed his transportation manager, Alan Fortas, to "order one for all the guys — but it has to be tonight."

The challenge was accepted by local dealer Bill Robertson & Sons, who delivered seven Triumph motorcycles that very evening, with two more arriving shortly afterwards. Elvis and his friends spent the night riding through Bel Air together, only calling it a day when neighbours complained about the noise and the police were summoned.

Today, Triumph is conducting a major search for the original Memphis Mafia Bonnevilles. Several promising leads have already surfaced, helping to piece together the history of these remarkable motorcycles.

One enthusiast revealed that she had previously owned Jerry Schilling's Bonneville and still retains the original registration documents to prove it. Although the motorcycle was later repainted pink and eventually sold on, its VIN has been verified, providing another important clue in the ongoing search and bringing Triumph one step closer to uncovering the fate of the legendary Memphis Mafia machines.

Whilst Triumph continue their search for the missing motorbikes, they did not waste time in recreating a stunning limited Elvis edition of the Bonneville T120 and here is the description of what they produced: -

Blending authentic Bonneville character with modern performance and capability, this striking motorcycle draws inspiration from Elvis' iconic 1968 "Comeback Special." The result is a machine that captures the spirit, style and charisma of one of music's greatest legends.

Distinctive ELVIS gold lettering, inspired by the stage lighting from the famous performance, features prominently on the fuel tank and side panels alongside Elvis Presley's signature. Enthusiasts will also discover a range of subtle design details throughout the motorcycle, including a discreet "Taking Care of Business in a Flash" emblem. This personal motto reflected Elvis' relentless work ethic and appeared on the necklaces gifted to members of his trusted inner circle, the Memphis Mafia.

The rich Carnival Red paint scheme takes inspiration from the custom J Daar Bonneville, created in 2023 to raise funds for the Elvis Presley Charitable Foundation. Like the Bonneville T120 TT featured in the comedy western Stay Away, Joe, and the Bonnevilles gifted to the Memphis Mafia in 1965, the modern T120 retains the unmistakable Bonneville DNA, timeless silhouette and beautifully sculpted fuel tank that first captured Elvis' attention. This special edition offers motorcycle enthusiasts and music fans a unique opportunity to own a genuine piece of Elvis and Triumph history. Limited to just 925 motorcycles worldwide, each T120 Elvis Presley Limited Edition features a numbered handlebar clamp engraved with Elvis Presley's signature. The bike is officially sold out at production level but still can still be found pre owned or through remaining showrooms. Owners will also receive a commemorative Sony Gold Disc presented in an exclusive Elvis Presley and Triumph Motorcycles record sleeve, containing a bespoke certificate of authenticity signed by Triumph CEO Nick Bloor and Jamie Salter, Founder, Chairman and CEO of ABG, Elvis Presley Enterprises.

Triumph stated that "It's been incredible to see the response from customers to the custom Bonneville that raised so much for charity earlier this year, as well as the enthusiasm surrounding our search for the original Memphis Mafia Bonnevilles, which continues to reveal fascinating stories from the past," said Triumph Chief Commercial Officer Paul Stroud. "Given the interest generated so far, we're confident our customers will be excited by the opportunity to own this exceptional tribute to the world's best-selling solo artist as it arrives in dealerships."

If you think you can help solve the mystery of the motorcycles or know anyone with information relating to the original Memphis Mafia Bonnevilles then please contact Triumph Motorcycles at elvistriumph@triumphmotorcycles.com.

Message from Rev. Derek

Hello to everyone,

Whatever form of transport you favour, it cannot be denied that travel is very much a feature of everyday life. I wonder how many miles you will have travelled in a lifetime. John Wesley, the founder of the Methodist Church, is said to have travelled about 250,000 miles as he went about the country preaching his sermons- and most of it on horseback!!

How many miles do you think Elvis travelled during the years of performing going by car, by bus, by train, by plane? Somebody will surely find out!! I know of one family who for a very special holiday were planning a world tour only to be told by their young son "couldn't we go somewhere else for a change?"

For many people the days leading up to Christmas involve a considerable amount of travel. I'm sure many of us will travel to a City Centre or some out of town superstore to do our Christmas shopping; others will travel still greater distances to be with family.

Actually, my son and his wife will travel from Cardiff to Newcastle in order to spend Christmas with us (I hope they remember to bring the Elvis DVD I've asked for!)

However, it occurs to me that travel is very much a feature of the Christmas story itself.

For example, Mary and Joseph had to travel a distance of about 85 miles from Nazareth to Bethlehem; the shepherds travelled a shorter distance from their fields to the stable; and who knows just how far the Wise Men from the East travelled to bring their gifts.

It seems that even from the beginning travel has been an integral part of Christmas.

What we often forget is the distance God travelled in order to be with us. He crossed the wilderness of space and the unknown so that He could make Himself known to us and truly be with us. After all, that is what the name "Immanuel" means, 'God with us'.

In all our travels this Christmas, I hope we arrive at the proper destination. For in so doing we will be enabled not only to celebrate Christmas for a day, but for always.

In fact, it's worth remembering what someone once said, namely He is both the journey and the journey's end. May God be with you in your travels and keep you safe.

With best wishes for a Blessed Christmas and a Peaceful New Year.

Rev Derek.

2027 Elvis Party Cruise

Sunday 4th July 2027 12noon until 4pm

Get ready to shake, rattle and roll because our ever-popular Elvis Party Cruise is back for 2027, and we're going all out with a spectacular Red, White & Blue 4th of July celebration theme!

This legendary event sells out every year, so don't miss your chance to join the ultimate rock 'n' roll party on the River Thames. Step aboard the magnificent Mississippi-style paddle steamer, the Dixie Queen, and prepare for an unforgettable afternoon packed with music, dancing and pure Elvis magic.

From the moment we cast off, the party begins! Dance the afternoon away, sing along to the King's greatest hits, and soak up the electric atmosphere as we cruise past some of London's most iconic landmarks. Our resident rock 'n' roll maestro DJ Bill Guntrip will keep the dance floor jumping, while the sensational Shane Baxendale delivers a thrilling live performance guaranteed to get you off your seats.

Prefer to take it easy? Grab your favourite cocktail from one of the two fully stocked bars, gather together your friends, and enjoy front-row views of the capital's stunning riverside scenery while our Elvis classics provide the perfect soundtrack.

And then comes the moment that makes this cruise truly unforgettable. As one of the world's most famous landmarks -Tower Bridge - opens before us, we'll raise our Elvis flags high in a spectacular salute to the King of Rock 'n' Roll. It's a breath-taking sight, a spine-tingling tradition, and a fitting tribute to the man whose music changed the world forever.

Adults £32.95 per person.

Echoes of Love

by Mary Clark

Who can believe that very soon we will all be focussing on the 50th Anniversary of Elvis' passing?

Many of us remember watching in disbelief as those grainy images came through our TV screens from Memphis on the daily news in August 1977. Certainly the funeral procession and the mountains of flowers were like nothing we had ever known. Many years down the line there were echoes of this at Kensington Palace after the passing of Princess Diana.

Much of this focus was on the peaceful resting place of Forest Hill Cemetery and its Mausoleum, some two and half miles from Graceland. It was a place that Elvis knew well, as this was where Gladys Presley had lain for 19 years. Elvis of course was a frequent visitor, placing her favourite flowers, red and white roses at the foot of the prominent white marble monument that Vernon and Elvis had commissioned, featuring an angel and two cherubs. It was this statue that was moved along with Elvis and Gladys to the grounds and safety of the Meditation Garden at Graceland on 2nd October 1977.

It is still possible to see the remnants of Gladys' grave and the sites of many more of Elvis' family, friends, musicians and staff, it gives a riveting insight into the history of Elvis' family tree.

A good friend of Strictly Elvis is Mary Clark, who has spent several years researching Forest Hill and in particular the many Elvis links and so we asked Mary what was it that made her so interested in this side of Elvis history; -

"From a very young age, I was fascinated not only by Elvis, but by his family, friends, and people who surrounded him. These were the people who knew him personally, shared important moments with him, supported him, and helped shape the man behind the legend.

Whilst I appreciated getting to know many of Elvis' family and friends, I had to accept that I would never have the opportunity to engage with the people Elvis knew and loved who had passed on. I therefore searched for a meaningful way to connect with their stories—by visiting their final resting places. Each grave and memorial offers another glimpse into Elvis' world and the relationships that were very important to him. I would visit their graves when I was in Memphis, researching and finding more and more. When my fellow Elvis friends were in town they'd ask to join me. Before I knew it more and more people wanted to pay their respects to Elvis' family and friends, that's how the Tombstone Tours came to be.

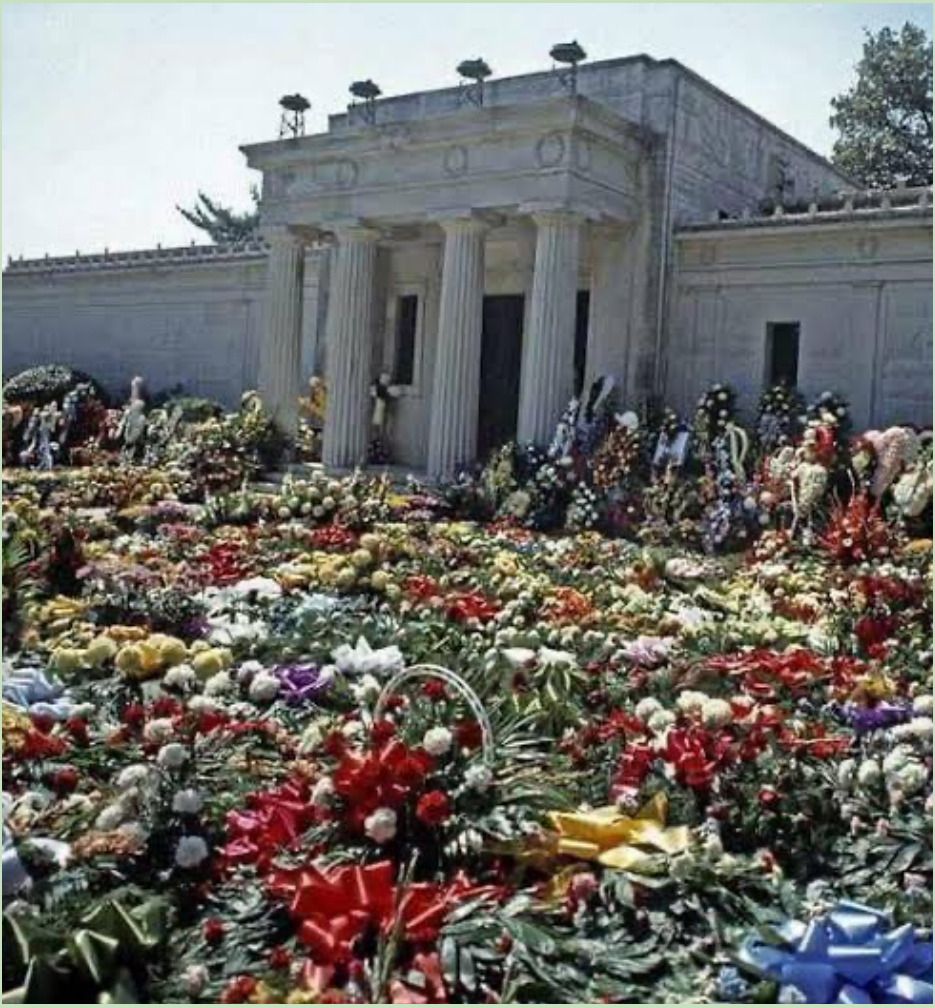

Rather than it being sad or morbid, it is an uplifting experience and a perfect way to keep their memories alive to make sure they are never forgotten.

On the Tour, we visit Gladys Presley's original resting place, Aunt Delta, Uncle Vester, members of the Memphis Mafia, and many others who were part of Elvis' life. Each person has a story, and together those stories help us better understand Elvis and the people closest to him. The Tour concludes at the mausoleum where Elvis was originally interred.

Tombstone Tourist Tour Guidebook is my labour of love, created for Elvis fans who want to go beyond the music and discover the people who helped shape his life. My hope is that their stories will be remembered with love, gratitude, and respect for generations to come".

Our Spring Break 2027 will include this tour as an optional visit with Mary Clark

Germany August 2027

If you can't be at Graceland for the 50th Anniversary, then join us in Germany. Bad Nauheim is a town steeped in Elvis history and where the spirit of Elvis can be truly felt, making it the perfect alternative to Memphis.

Our tour coincides with the huge European Elvis Festival, a weekend full of events celebrating Elvis' incredible life and legacy with fellow fans from around the world. Already becoming a bigger spectacular every year, 2027 promises to be the biggest yet with a packed-programme of concerts, star guests, dance parties, classic car parades, film shows and much more.

You'll also get to take our Elvis Travel Service tour of Bad Nauheim, the most comprehensive there is, showing you where Elvis lived, shopped, socialised and served during his Army tenure. Much of the town is unchanged allowing you to see the very locations that are familiar from famous Elvis photos as you walk in Elvis' footsteps in the town he once called home.

Day 1. Thursday 12th August 2027
Flight from London Heathrow direct to Frankfurt where our waiting coach will take us first for a visit to Bad Homburg. We'll see the plush hotel which was the first that Elvis stayed in after arriving into Germany with the US Army. Onward then to Bad Nauheim and our hotel – the Dolce, which is the centre of the events of the Elvis Festival.
Evening at leisure.

Day 2. Friday 13th August
Breakfast at the hotel. Morning's guided walking tour of Bad Nauheim. We'll see the many Elvis sights in the town, mostly unchanged since Elvis lived here. See the house and hotel he lived in, the exact locations from many iconic photos and the fantastic Elvis in Bronze statue. Along the way you'll hear stories of Elvis' time here. This afternoon the Festival will open, and a Festival pass is included in your holiday cost allowing you to partake in many of the activities and events*.
Evening at leisure.

Days 3 and 4. Saturday 14th & Sunday 15th August
Breakfast at the hotel. Two full days to use your Festival pass and enjoy the many activities and events of this, the largest weekend Elvis Festival in Europe. The whole town of Bad Nauheim comes alive with not only Elvis music but Elvis fans from all over the world creating an amazing atmosphere.

You'll also have time to revisit the sights from the walking tour of the town, join your tour manager for a walk up the Johannisberg Hilltop for spectacular views (or to enjoy coffee and cake) and to visit Friedberg (also included in your holiday cost) where Elvis served at Ray Barracks.

Day 5. Monday 16th August
Breakfast at the hotel. The Elvis Festival has an extra day added for the special 50th Anniversary, and we'll be there to enjoy the additional events that are being based around the theme of Elvis' gospel music. On this poignant day being in a town that has such close ties to Elvis' life, plus being there with fellow fans, will make this a very special day.

Day 6. Tuesday 17th August
Breakfast at the hotel. Morning visit to the famous 'rose village' of Steinfurth, where Elvis and his platoon moved a War Memorial on behalf of the villagers – an event that was covered by the local and international press. Onward then to Frankfurt Airport to join our flight back to the UK, arriving in the late afternoon.

The tour is inclusive of the following:

- Return scheduled flights inclusive of taxes, security charges and baggage allowance
- 5 nights' superior quality accommodation at the Dolce Hotel, inclusive of taxes and breakfast
- Return coach transfers between Frankfurt Airport and Bad Nauheim
- A guided walking tour of Bad Nauheim including a souvenir guidebook
- Return train ride to Friedberg
- A 4-day pass to the European Elvis Festival (please note some events eg. concerts may be an extra cost)
- Driver gratuities
- The services of an experienced Elvis Travel Service Tour Manager

*The full Elvis Festival programme is still being finalised. We will send details to all those who have booked as soon as details are available, including information on how to book events that are at an additional cost to the 4-day Festival pass included in your holiday cost.

Prices
Single room £2148 per person
Twin/Double Room £1528 per person
Twin/Double with extra rollaway bed £1348 per person
